Ankara, March 12 (QNA) – Turkish President Recep Tayyip Erdogan said Wednesday that his government is working on establishing Turkiye as a central hub for “peace diplomacy” beyond being a source for regional stability.

Speaking at a meeting in the Turkish Parliament, the President said that this is a tough period, full of tensions, wars, and conflicts, whether in the region or across various parts of the world, adding that in face of all these negative developments, Turkiye, the Turkish people, and the Justice and Development Party, are all committed to remaining totally hopeful and determined.

Erdogan said that Turkiye is not only carrying the banner of goodwill, but is also spreading peace to all corners of the world, especially to the oppressed
