The Ready Future Education Center has launched “Your Voice is Power”, a groundbreaking initiative offering free educational scholarships to learners from all backgrounds, with a special focus on individuals with disabilities. This pioneering program aims to transform digital education into a vehicle for empowerment, inclusion, and meaningful social participation. The initiative offers four core learning tracks: artificial intelligence courses (from beginner to advanced levels), programming lessons in Python and Scratch, specially designed accessible programs for individuals with visual, hearing, or mobility challenges, and creative workshops in digital content creation and personal development. Each course is tailored to meet diverse learner needs and foster both digital fluency and creative confidence. The program is delivered in partnership with the Qatar Society for Special Needs and is supported by the IBC Center. Together, they ensure the initiative upholds the highest standards of inclusive education while creating a respectful and supportive learning environment.

Several inspiring success stories have already emerged. Among them are Maysoun, a Syrian student with autism; Ahmed and Enas, Egyptian residents; and Mohammed, a Lebanese learner in Qatar. Each is actively participating in software development training and demonstrating remarkable progress.

Dr. Mervat Ibrahim, Executive Director of the Ready Future Center and a recognized authority in digital education and social responsibility, emphasized that education is a right for all. She noted that the initiative is about more than just skills it's about unlocking potential and rebuilding self-confidence.

The Center plans to expand the initiative to include elderly learners and other marginalized groups, reflecting its ongoing commitment to lifelong learning and integration. Interested individuals may register via the Center's social media platforms or through official contact channels.
