Hameed Shaheen Ali, has said that US, China, Russia have emerged as three stanchions (poles) of today's globe, creating multiple alliance choices for the rest of the 190 nations of the world, all members of the United Nations.

“UN is a 193-nation world organization exercising its institutional authority over them all, he said in an exclusive talk with this this Correspondent here today.

Mr Shaheen Alvi was invited to speak on today's geo-physical state of the globe. “Strategic interests of these three vying powers have compounded criticality of the world. Nations other than these three stanchions are left with no choice but to align themselves in groups or in leagues with one pole or the other. US calculates this strategic divide as curtailment of her global influence and grip over her alliance. China and Russia are confident strategic pals today”, he stated.

“China is progressing along her markedly defined road map with diversification of economy; especially its roads and belt programmed manifesto has practically attracted countries in Asian, Latin American continents for participation in Chinese planned econo-projects”, Mr Alvi stated.

He said that there is left no option for the US to renew her old alliances across the globe. But physical changes in the continental and subcontinental countries affiliations may pose sufficient hurdles in her alliances revival efforts, he explained.

He pointed out that Russia is militarily engaged in Ukraine. Ukraine as a geography is very vital for Moscow. Ukraine's geo-political leaning shall define the future focus of Russia, and this obviously engages her security attention, he remarked.
