added.

“We have broken a decades-long status quo and prioritized merit. When I took office, the Prime Minister’s Secretariat budget was Rs. 640 million—today, it stands at Rs. 290 million,” he said.

“Serving people is my mission; power is divine trust, not a privilege,” he remarked, stressing that public service was not possible under an exploitative system.

He further shared that the Public Service Commission had been reactivated and nearly 3,000 teachers were recruited through NTS on merit.
