DOHA, Qatar, October 7, 2025— Boeing has appointed Hamad Marzouq Al Abdulla as Senior Manager for International Business Development for Boeing Defense, Space & Security (BDS) in Qatar. In this role, Al Abdulla will lead sales campaigns and customer engagement for Boeing’s defense products and services, reinforcing the company’s long-standing partnership with Qatar.

Al Abdulla joins Boeing following a distinguished 30-year career with the Qatar Armed Forces, retiring in 2023 at the rank of brigadier general. An accomplished air traffic control officer and instructor, he held multiple senior operational and leadership positions throughout his service.

A graduate of the Royal Air Force Cranwell Officer Training Course in the United Kingdom, Al Abdulla has completed extensive international military education and training in the UK, Oman, France, China, and Qatar. He holds two master’s degrees in military leadership, administrative sciences, and strategic studies.

“Hamad’s deep operational expertise, leadership experience, and strong understanding of Qatar’s defense priorities make him an exceptional addition to our team,” said Wael Zaoud, Managing Director, Middle East & North Africa at Boeing. “His appointment reflects Boeing’s commitment to strengthening our presence in Qatar and delivering the advanced capabilities and support our customers need to achieve their mission objectives.”

Boeing has been a trusted partner to Qatar for decades, providing advanced defense platforms, training, and sustainment solutions. Al Abdulla's leadership will further enhance Boeing's ability to support Qatar's national defense objectives and long-term strategic vision.
