HAMILTON, Canada— Donald Trump said Friday that his upcoming meeting with Xi Jinping could be “potentially historic,” expressing optimism about bilateral engagement.

In a post on his social media platform Truth Social, Trump noted that President Xi was pleased with developments regarding the Strait of Hormuz, which is now open or in the process of reopening for shipping.

Trump described the anticipated meeting in China as “special,” adding that significant progress is expected from the talks. “Much will be accomplished,” he said, signaling confidence in the outcome of high-level discussions between the two global powers.

While no specific date has been announced, the expected meeting is seen as an important step toward strengthening diplomatic and economic ties amid evolving global dynamics.
