ISLAMABAD:

The federal cabinet decided on Tuesday that no new duty will be imposed on solar panels to ensure the common man's access to renewable solar energy. They decided that low-cost renewable solar energy would soon reach every citizen. In addition, the federal cabinet meeting, chaired by Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif, approved the export of sugar in a limited quantity after the Sugar Advisory Board advised that ample reserves of sugar were currently present in the country. Apart from this, the Prime Minister directed the formation of a cabinet committee to monitor the price of sugar, stating that if there is any fear of an increase in the price of sugar, further exports will be stopped. During the promising that the privileges of elites and exploiters of the country's resources will be abolished. He vowed that providing economic security to the common man and equal development opportunities is the government's first priority.
